I think America may collapse before China does. China uses public banking, and public banking is better for the whole country, economically and socially, than private banking, which is only good for mostly the top 1% or maybe a trickle down to the top 10-20%. This whole thing about going after China is interesting.

Espionage Emergency: China 'Floods' America with Spies

About 20 years ago, there was a lawyer from Los Angeles by the name of Gordon Chang, who wrote a book, "The coming collapse of China." Chang's main theme in the book is that the hidden nonperforming loans of the Chinese state-owned banks would likely bring down China's financial system and the governing regime.

The collapse of 'the coming collapse of China' theory - CGTN

Predictions of the coming collapse of Chinese politics are today commonplace, however this thought-provoking book explores a radically different alternative. China, it argues, is a one-party-dominated political system whose surprising levels of public support and resilience in the face of serious economic, environmental and social problems suggest that it is more durable than most outside observers suppose.
